PART 1

This question is compulsory.

It is recommended you spend approximately 30 minutes on this question.

Question 10

There is debate in Tasmania about a number of proposed tourist developments. Local and interstate companies are applying for greater access to Tasmania’s world-renowned and protected National Parks and Heritage areas.

Some of these companies aim to provide more luxurious and upmarket eco-tourism experiences for local, inter-state and overseas tourists to visit Tasmania and experience its unique natural and heritage environment. Proposed development areas include Cradle Mountain, Walls of Jerusalem, Freycinet National Park, and the South-Coast Track.

Discuss the potential impact of these proposed developments on human-nature experiences of tourists and locals. In your answer, also discuss any future concerns and long-term management strategies of such wilderness areas.

Question 11

The ability of different groups to develop a significant and positive relationship with nature, and demonstrate care for nature, will depend on a number of factors. Types of interactions, uses and experiences all play a part in how people perceive and experience natural environments.

Choose a particular group such as Aboriginal people, early colonial settlers, industry (forestry, mining, agriculture, fishing, recreation and adventure based activities, or enterprise / employment / resources).

Explain how your chosen group interacts with the natural environment and how they might develop a unique sense of place and space. (30 minutes)

OR

Question 12

Peter Martin's 'Signposts to Nature' is a model which attempts to describe the way in which people have a relationship with a natural environment.

Using Peter Martin's 'Signposts to Nature', describe how outdoor leaders can facilitate a connection with natural environments. In your answer, describe how the values of outdoor leaders can influence the progression of views and attitudes toward the natural environment. (30 minutes)
